MANAGEMENT COMMENT

The 2-year US Treasury fell by 16bps to finish at +4.87%. A rate cut is not expected before the end of the year. The central bank is currently active on its balance sheet. At the May 1st FOMC meeting it was announced that the monthly balance sheet roll-off would be reduced from $60B to $25B per month for Treasury holdings. With core inflation remaining above 2%, interest rates will remain high for longer than expected at the end of 2023. Credit premium have continued to tighten following the episode of widening in April. Against this backdrop, the carry of the fund remains high, with an interest rate duration of over 1 year. Investment in corporate debt is more cautious, with very little high yield and an average credit quality equivalent to BBB.
